Another Scandal.

Senator Chandler's resolution directing an investigation into the organization of the Dominion Coal company and its connection with the placing of coal on the free list in the Wilson bill, is justified by the repeated charges that have been made concerning the matter. It is still fresh in the minds of the public that the demand for free coal came originally from those interested in the Whitney Nova Scotia coal syndicate, and that few people believed that such a demand from such a source would be considered. It had always been held by the Democratic statesmen, including Mr. Wilson, that a duty on coal was simply a revenue duty and not inconsistent with the party's pledge of tariff reform. Every other Democratic tariff bill had retained the duty and the sentiment of the country was decidedly in its favor. In the face of these facts coal was placed upon the free list in the Wilson tariff bill, and it was openly charged that it was done in obedience to the demand of the Whitney syndicate, which is composed of the President's political friends and contributors to the Democratic campaign fund.

However this may be, it was certain free coal was demanded by Mr. Cleveland and his recent letter to Chairman Wilson confirmed the belief. Whether it was done purely in the interest of the Whitney syndicate or not, if free coal is adopted, or if even the reduced duty provided for in the senate bill is adopted, the Nova Scotia combination will reap a large benefit from it.

An official document published by President Cleveland's own administration—the annual report of the United States geological survey, dated on September 30 last—contains the following significant paragraph:

"It may be noted as a fact of some interest that the imports of coal (from Nova Scotia) never so large, have fallen off steadily, until last year there was scarcely any received at this point. Now, however, that the Cape Breton county coal fields have passed into the hands of Mr. William C. Whitney and his associates, new and improved machinery will be employed, both increasing the output and reducing the cost of mining, and on the primitive methods hitherto employed. It is expected that, as a result, more of this coal will eventually find its way into this market in competition with the product from Pennsylvania mines."

This was written at a time when it was not regarded as probable that coal would be placed on the free list. If, with a duty of 75 cents per ton on coal, the Whitney syndicate, according to this official report, hoped to compete with the Pennsylvania and West Virginia product in the east, how much better will it be for it to control that market under the 40-cent tariff which it is now probable will be adopted?

The feeling is growing upon the country that the free coal feature of the Wilson bill was adopted in the interest of the Dominion company; that when it reached the senate and met there the opposition from the Maryland and West Virginia senators, the forty-cent duty was fixed by the finance committee as a compromise between the demand of the Whitney agents and the kicking senators. Mr. Chandler's resolution contemplates a thorough investigation of the matter with a view to getting at the bottom facts.

The scandals that have followed in the train of the tariff bill from the beginning to the present are enough to condemn it in the eyes of the people, and they are beginning to understand that the peculiar brand of tariff reform which the Democratic statesmen are wrangling over at Washington is in reality a gigantic bunco scheme.

Dogs keeps talking about the strike. Why does not Mr. Debs keep up with the procession and talk about things that have an existence?

In his speech before the Iowa Democratic convention ex-Governor Hoies said that any man who was willing that the Democratic party should retrace a single step from the position it had taken in 1892 was not a Democrat. It must be inferred from this that Governor Hoies has excommunicated all the Democratic members of Congress from the party.

The Tariff Compromise.

The country will breathe a sigh of relief at the news that the long tariff agitation is nearly over. The compromise bill, which, of course, will please nobody—compromises never do—and which will be passed merely as a campaign makeshift, if passed at all, is at least in such shape that the business interests of the country will know upon what basis they will have to adjust themselves.

The bill, as it will be reported by the conferees, will be neither the house nor the senate measure, though nearer the senate measure than the house "what is it?" The Democratic party will be ashamed to own it and the people will repudiate it at the polls. Until the terms of the compromise are fully known it cannot be predicted what its fate will be in the senate and at the hands of the President.

There is no reason for delay in the adoption of the Boutelle resolution recognizing the Hawaiian republic. The new government is an established fact and there is no longer any hope for the restoration of the corrupt monarchy which President Cleveland tried to save.

Now that the senate is through with the investigation of the sugar trust and its connection with tariff legislation, let the investigation of the connection of the Dominion Coal Company with the adoption of free coal by the Wilson committee proceed.

It seems that the sugar trust has conquered at last. The house conferees, it is stated from Washington, are willing to accept the senate schedule. Let's see; what was it the President said about "party peridy and party dishonor?"

The anarchist assassin of President Carnot, of France, is sentenced to die by the guillotine. The only good anarchists are dead anarchists and Cesarro Santo will soon be numbered among them.

RANDOM POLITICAL NOTES.

Politically, the week just closed has been interesting, and Republican stock remains at a premium. Locally, the trend of events continues in the direction of Republican success. There is not a ripple to disturb the serenity of the Republican waters, while, on the other hand, the mutterings of a coming storm in Democratic quarters are plainly heard. The Republican atmosphere in the First congressional district was made clear by the unanimous nomination of a candidate for Congress by a convention notable for its harmony and enthusiasm. The chosen standard bearer, Hon. Blackburn Barrett Dovenor, was clearly the choice of the people of the district. In those counties in which the delegates were chosen at popular elections he had swept everything by overwhelming majorities, demonstrating that he was the popular candidate, and this had the effect of solidifying other counties for him, without disparaging the merits of opposing aspirants. So when the convention met it was prepared to ratify the apparent will of the majority of the Republicans of the district. There was an earnestness manifested in making the choice that portended victory. The spirit that prevailed was not a result of momentary excitement, but of a deep conviction that the district must be redeemed this fall, and that what is needed to bring victory is the presentation of a united front and the collective and individual work on the part of all who believe in sending to Congress a man who will faithfully and patriotically represent the great industrial interests of the district. The work of the convention and the business-like manner in which it was accomplished will be fruitful of good results, one of which will be a strengthening of the Republican position all along the line, inspiring every man to work early and late for party success.

It is significant of the aggressive position of the Republicans this year, especially in this district, that they are taking the initiative in the campaign. In most of the counties their local tickets are in the field and they have not waited to see who the Democratic candidates will be before naming their man for Congress. If the spirit now apparent is maintained to the end there will be no defeat. On the other hand, we find the Democrats, nervous and anxious because of the failures of a Democratic Congress and its tampering with the welfare of the country, timidly holding back and waiting "to see what Congress does," waiting to see what sort of a dish of tariff reform their representatives, blundering, wrangling incompetents at Washington are going to set before them. Torn by internal dissensions, and embarrassed by the remarkable and unbusinesslike record made by Congress, they are hesitating before they leap to—they know not where.

With the First district convention less than three weeks off, the woods, usually so full of self-sacrificing Democratic statesmen, anxious to serve an intelligent constituency in Congress, do not contain a single openly and avowed candidate for the nomination. To be sure, Mr. Pendleton, in a half-hearted way, says that he is willing, providing somebody else isn't anxious to shoulder the responsibility; to be sure, two men here in Ohio county, Col. W. W. Arnett and Prosecuting Attorney John A. Howard, after much persuasion, have consented to allow the use of their names for the purpose of downing Mr. Pendleton, and to-day's primaries will result in the Ohio county delegation being divided between Arnett, Howard and Pendleton; to be sure, Mr. Lewis, Col. Ben Wilson and others have been modestly "suggested" by their admirers; and to be sure there is a feeling among the faithful that something in the nature of a contest must be got up in order to entwine the boys and make it worth their while to turn out to the convention. And there is an uncertainty, an "all-at-once-ness," about the situation that causes Democrats to look at each other inquiringly and ask, "Where the deuce are we at, anyhow?"

After the primaries will come the county convention, when the legislative state fixed up in the interest of Senator Camden will be ratified, and, with strange inconsistency, the Wilson bill will be endorsed as the embodiment of Democratic principles. Perhaps, also, with equal inconsistency, the President's recent letter denouncing Senator Camden and the other Democratic senators for their "party peridy and party dishonor" will be endorsed as "wise and patriotic." To endorse the President and the Wilson bill and at the same time nominate a Camden legislative ticket, will be, in themselves, enough to give the Ohio county Democracy the political jim-jams. But a little matter like consistency never stands in the way of a Democratic convention following out the lines laid down by the bosses. Incidental to the probability that the legislative ticket will be for Camden, it may be observed that Ohio county will be one of the few counties in which Camden has "gotten in his work." Throughout nearly the entire southern portion of the state the anti's have been successful, and in several counties in the northern portion the senator has failed to connect, notably in Lewis county, his former home. A number of legislative candidates have been instructed for Ex-Governor Wilson, and in other counties the conventions have endorsed his campaign against Camden. All this means that the senator is losing ground, while the Chilton-MacCorkle combine is gradually fixing its hold on the state. The money Mr. Camden will spend in Ohio county, is, unless a reverse tide sets in, pretty sure to be money wasted.

But to return to the congressional situation. The Register's local political article on Friday caused a laugh by its assertion that "There are unmistakable signs floating around thus early in the congressional fight in this district that the Republicans are worried over the vote to be polled by Mr. Staley, the Prohibition candidate." The joke lies in the Register's apparent ignorance of the fact that Mr. Staley is not the Prohibition candidate for Congress, but is the Populist nominee, and stands upon a "middle of the road" platform, pledging him not only to make any coalition with Republicans, but to vote for a Populist for President in case he is elected and the next presidential election is thrown into the house of representatives. The absurdity of the Register's statement is on a par with all of its ridiculous attempts to create dissensions among Republicans. The fact of the matter is, our Democratic friends have greater cause to fear the Populist candidates as factors in the coming election than the Republicans have, for the reason that Democrats can vote for them with more consistency than can any Republican. There is not a very wide chasm between the Democratic and Populist platforms. Both are for free trade, and Populist and Democratic fusions in the west in 1892 are mainly responsible for the presence of Populists in the house and senate to-day. The porturbation on account of the Populist nomination for Congress is among Democrats. Republicans are not doing any worrying this year.

It seems to be finally settled that Chairman William L. Wilson will accept a re-nomination in the Second district, whatever may be the fate of his emaculated tariff "reform" bill, and his federal officeholders and free trade friends are making ready to start him on the road to defeat by nominating him with a wild hurrah. The wild hurrah, of course, will be for its moral effect on the farmers who are getting starvation prices for their wool and the miners who he proposed to throw out of work by trying to place coal on the free list, in the interest of the Nova Scotia coal syndicate's consuming desire to gain control of the New England and Eastern coal markets. Speaking of the free coal question reminds me that an incident occurred during Mr. Gorman's speech in the senate the other day, which must have immensely interested Mr. Wilson's constituents. In the report of Mr. Gorman's speech appears this passage:

"He went back to the platform of 1881, on which he said Mr. Cleveland was elected by the grace of God and a great deal of hard work. It did not provide for free raw materials. The bill prepared by his distinguished radical friend (Mr. Mills) placed 75 cents duty on coal. 'I was in the same situation then,' interrupted Mr. Mills, 'that I am now. I was in the hands of half a dozen men who forced a duty on coal. It was not my choice.' 'I am not attacking you,' said Mr. Gorman deprecatingly.

"You said I prepared a bill with taxed coal in it," replied Mr. Mills hotly.
 "Mr. Gorman then gave the history of the convention of 1885, when he said the radicals were in the saddle."

A resolution was adopted endorsing the Mills bill taxing coal. Mr. Cleveland accepted it and stood on it.
 Mr. Wilson's constituents have a vivid recollection of what Mr. Mills referred to when he said that he "was in the hands of a half-dozen men who forced a duty on coal." Mr. Wilson, who was a member of the Mills ways and means committee, was one of those men and went before the people of his district in the ensuing campaign and congratulated them on the fact that he had been there to stand between them and free coal. It was a vindication, he thought, and they thought, from the charge made against him previously that he favored free coal. He eloquently testified for their interest how he had fought and had contested before the committee and had come out. Had Mr. Wilson voted for free coal then, or had it been known that he over world, so to speak, much less father a bill that would contain such a feature, his Democratic constituents never would have ignored him with a re-election to Congress. Now that he has gone back upon that record and, at the dictation of Mr. Cleveland and the Nova Scotia coal syndicate, not only constructed a tariff bill in which coal was placed on the free list, but advocated its passage, with especial emphasis on the coal schedule, it will require, in the language of Senator Gorman, "the grace of God and a great deal of hard work" to re-elect him.

Who Mr. Wilson's Republican competitor will be does not appear at this writing. The abundance of good material to choose from, and the activity of the canvass that is being made by the various candidates, leaves the result of the convention to be held at Elkins in doubt. With such men as Dayton, Sturges, Fortney and others in the field, the convention will be able to make a choice without much danger of committing a serious blunder. There is a demand from all over the district for ex-Secretary Elkins to accept the nomination, but it is understood that he will not permit the use of his name, preferring rather to lend his hearty assistance to the candidate, whom he thinks should be chosen from among those who have been mentioned. Mr. Elkins could be elected hands down, and his nomination would create a wave of enthusiasm throughout the district, but that is not saying that some other man's nomination would not do the same thing. Unless, as Col. James B. Toney would say, Mr. Elkins is forced to "relax his negation" by the overwhelming demand that is going up from every direction, the chances are that a ballot will be required at the convention, and the best man will win, for Republicans are not, as a rule, throwing away opportunities this year.

In my notes last week I took occasion, I hope in dignified language, to nail a silly falsehood concerning the political antecedents of the editor of the INTELLIGENCER, which had been iterated and reiterated by the Wheeling Register. Instead of gracefully admitting the truth of my statement, the Register referred to it only by applying an abusive epithet to me. The abuse doesn't hurt. I am simply, since receiving it, more convinced than ever of the truth of my observation last week, that if certain editors possess a sense of professional courtesy and understand the proprieties of journalism their conduct does not show it. Blackguardism doesn't successfully combat the truth, nor answer argument.

Overdue Ship Heard From.
 SAN FRANCISCO, CALA., August 3.—The Alameda from Australia, brings the news that the overdue ship Shandon had put into Honolulu from Calcutta in distress. The vessel is bound here from Calcutta and has a valuable cargo of jute and gunny on board. She is out 143 days from Calcutta and 136 from Sanger. Considerable anxiety has prevailed in shipping and insurance circles for her safety, not a word having been heard from her since she sailed from Sanger. The vessel was blown out of her course and ran short of provisions. Captain Harris decided to return to Honolulu and the islands were reached just in time, as the men were so weak that they were unable to man the yards.

Steamer Burns.
 VANCOUVER, B. C., August 3.—The steamer Saturn had a narrow escape from being burned to the water's edge. After anchoring her crew went ashore, intending to return at night. During their absence the fire started and gained considerable headway before it was discovered. When the firemen arrived they had to lay several hundred feet of hose and waded up to their necks in water. The deck was completely destroyed, but the hull and machinery were saved.

Nothing Strange.
 Intelligent people, who realize the important part the blood holds in keeping the body in a normal condition, find nothing strange in the number of diseases Hood's Sarsaparilla is able to cure. So many troubles result from impure blood, the best way to treat them is through the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla vitalizes the blood.

Hood's Pills are the best after-dinner pills, assist digestion, prevent constipation.
